The ABC is at the heart of the public square, seeking to tell the stories that reflect and engage Australians. In recent times, the broadcaster has often found itself making news, rather than just reporting it. In a challenging and contested media landscape, leading a news organisation has rarely been more complex and demanding.

In a special appearance at the Melbourne Press Club, ABC Director, News Justin Stevens discusses the media environment, talks about the issues of trust and transparency, the principles that drive ABC News and the personal values that motivate him as its leader. It's a not-to-be missed event.

About Justin

Justin Stevens has been the ABC's Director, News since April 2022.

In this role he oversees the ABC's news operations in metro and regional Australia and internationally and all its digital, radio and TV news and current affairs output. Previously Justin was Executive Producer of 7.30 from 2018 until 2022.

He joined the ABC in 2006 working as a producer on programs including 7.30 and Four Corners and documentary series Keating: the Interviews and The Killing Season. His work has been recognised with Logie and AACTA awards and Walkley nominations. His first job in the media was as a researcher for the Nine Network on Sunday and for Geoffrey Robertson's Hypotheticals.
